

ELK OUTING

Elk don't always know what is good for them. Sometimes, in fact, they have to be pushed into it — literally. In Star Valley, Wyoming, each spring, on the first Sunday after Mother's Day, they are kindly but firmly dislodged from their winter feeding grounds in the valley and sent up to higher ground to spend the summer. The occasion has become an annual social event for the local people, a great, happy, rambling picnic on horseback, a mixture of spring festival and country fair.

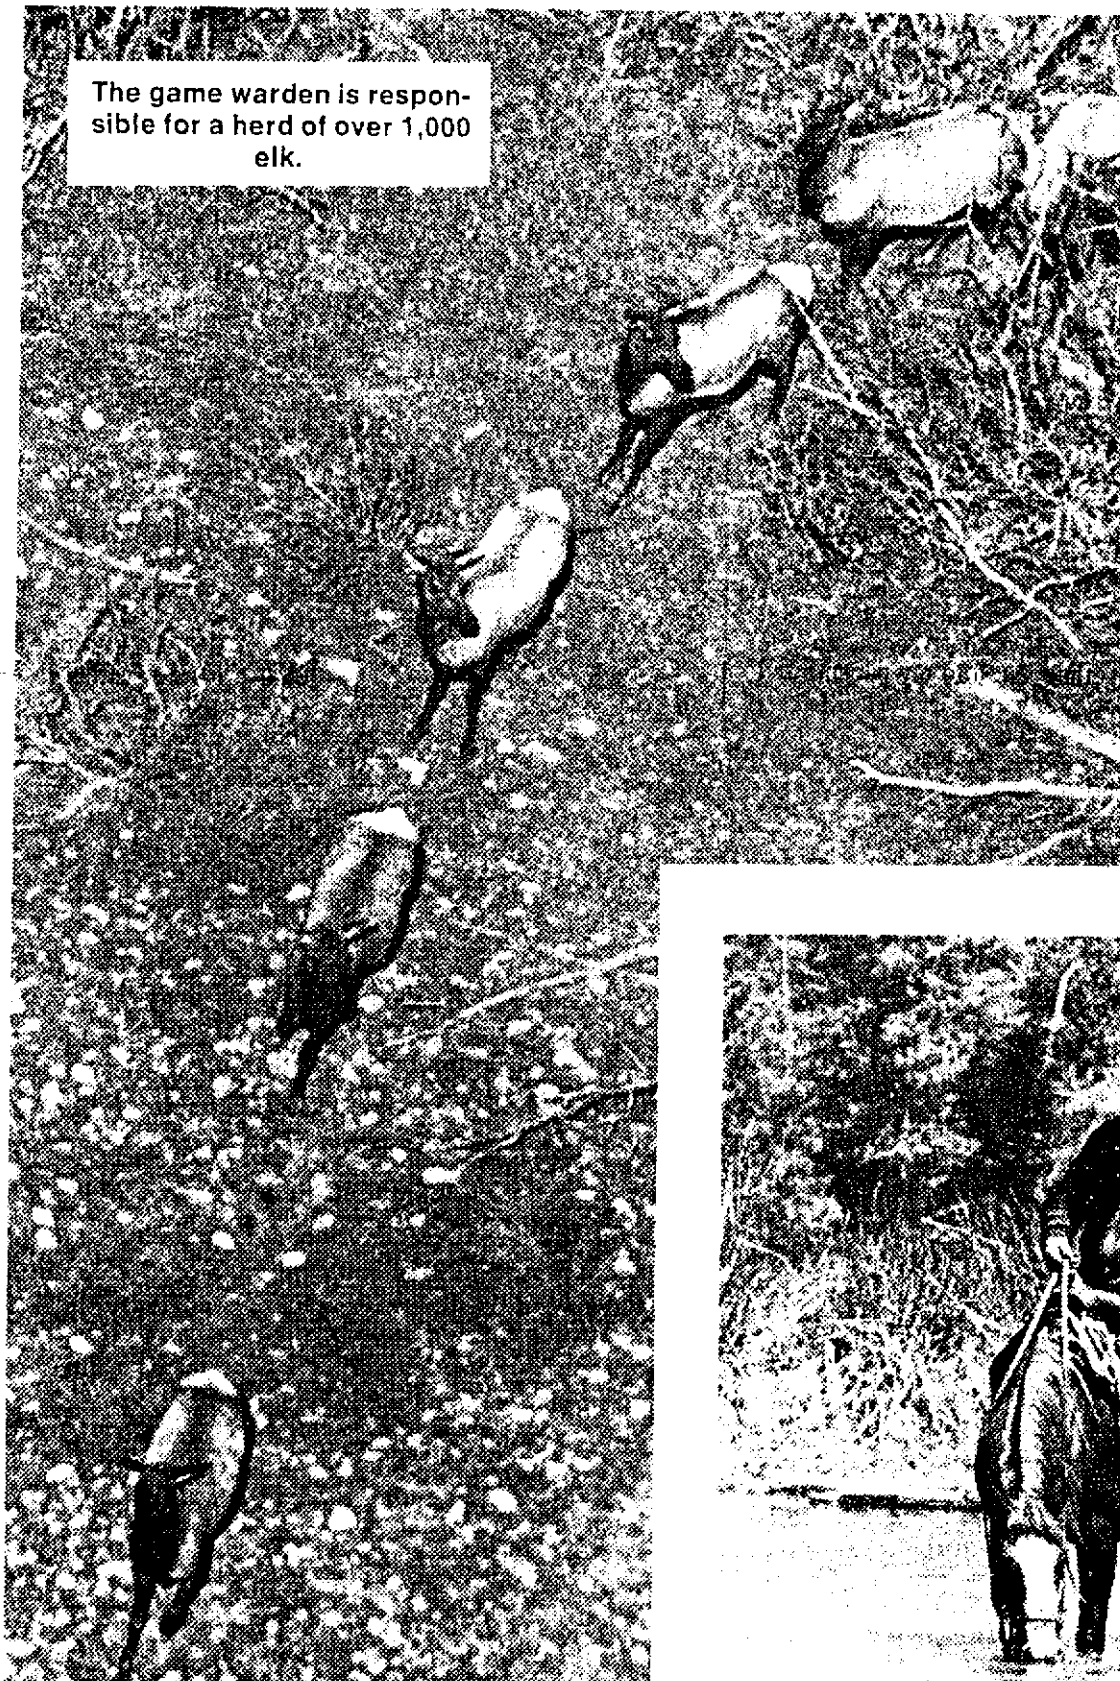

The originator of this benevolent maneuver is Newel Gardner, game warden at Afton in the Star Valley. When he took over, 12 years ago, he realized that the elk should be moved from winter to summer feeding ground before calving time — after calving the females are reluctant to move, stay on in the wintering area and eat up winter food during the summer. So, in 1956 Garner and five companions carried out the first drive. Since then it has developed into the opening outing of the season for the community.

Early in the morning, cars and trailers bring horses and riders to the site, the Salt River and Greys River valleys about 30 miles north of Afton. The drive itself is not exactly a testing ordeal. After saddling and mounting, the crowd of riders move off in the direction of the herd. The elk cooperate, oddly enough, against the whole spirit of the day, by being downright anti-social. As soon as they catch sight of the riders they willingly scamper off towards the high ground where they spend the summer.

The riders carry on happily over the mountains to Greys Valley where a very welcome feed has been prepared: elk stew, moose hamburgers (mainly meat confiscated from game law violators), and trimmings. The open air is the finest appetizer, and the whole party is seasoned with high spirits and good company. There is the knowledge that a useful job has been done in the cycle of natural life — with all the pleasure of a neighborly get-together.

Hosts and organizers, game warden Newel Gardner and his wife, Blanche.

The game warden is responsible for a herd of over 1,000 elk.

This year, there were 640 riders of all ages—most of whom hardly saw even one elk.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

MISS REBECCA FULTON

Mr. and Mrs. Brooks Fulton of Bleivins announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Rebecca, to Zane Carroll, son of Mr. and Mrs. Welch Carroll of St. Paul, Arkansas. Rebecca is a 1968 graduate of Bleivins High School. She is employed by Emerson Electric, Rogers, Arkansas. Zane is employed by Springdale Carpet Service Springdale, Arkansas. A December wedding is planned.

Gopher Nip Tied Wedding Knot

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Photo model Jacqueline Lotte Hermans is the prize in the current question and answer contest of Candy, one of the Dutch monthly sex magazines.

A picture of the 22-year-old model, titled, "You can have me on April 25th for the whole weekend," is published above the contest rules.

Lotte said her contract allows her to refuse to go along with the deal if the man is over 75, shows clear evidence of physical or mental abnormality or is drunk.

"They can't trifle with me," she said. "I've got control of myself. My boyfriend knows me well enough that he believes I'm not going to do anything crazy."

McDermott Wins by Knockout

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Brenda Jean Shamlian and Haig Arakelian Jr. will be married Saturday. They met because she was nipped on the toe by a gopher.

Brenda, 23, a dark-eyed brunette from San Francisco was playing touch football last June 23 when she was bitten. A picture taken after she received a tetanus shot was published in Modesto, where Arakelian, 25, a teacher, lives.

He called Brenda for a date and that started their romance.

Clean Combs Often

Be sure that you select combs which can withstand constant cleaning. You may want to use a disinfectant on your favorite combs, and hard-rubber combs withstand these fluids best. Your comb should be smooth to reduce hair pull and protect brittle hair. The more flexible the comb, such as hard rubber, the less brittle it will be and the more "give" it will have. Be certain that the teeth of your comb are rounded so they won't dig into your scalp.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

ARE PARENTS TO BLAME?

Dear Helen: There is a lot of talk of how today's teens are so rebellious. Let me tell you think they had reason to rebel. All three have left home.

One guy was always called an animal because he has fairly long hair. For no reason, he was given ridiculous restrictions. His father would not buy him any clothes or give him any money because he didn't work. Another guy is an only child, but his mother felt her dogs were more important than he was. He hasn't been home in two months.

The last case is a girl. Her parents were always calling her a tramp, and saying the only way she could make a living was to become a street walker. Her mother threw her out, and she is now living at our house. Her mother called yesterday to ask if she was ready to apologize for leaving.

Why are parents like this? My folks are the kindest and most understanding people in the world. We have our fights and clear the air and then things are fine again. Those three kids would be beaten for trying to defend themselves. Why, why, why?—A.W.

Dear A: . . . Because the label "parent" doesn't automatically make a frightened, insecure person all-wise, just as the label "young adult" doesn't always signify maturity.

I hope your friends find better homes than they left—or come to realize their homes were't so bad after all.—H. Dear Helen: My brother hates my boy friend. My parents don't like him very much either.

When he was only 15, he got into some trouble—car stealing. Then a girl accused him of rape, but she led him on, and only said that to get herself out of trouble.

He is now almost 19, and Helen, he's changed. He has never even had a drink when he's with me, and he has very high ideals, about waiting until marriage, etc.

He has plans to go to college, but first he is going into the Service. He'll be leaving in just weeks, and I want to date him until then.

But my brother knocked him down last night, when he saw us together. He told my parents and they won't even let me talk to him on the phone.

Is it fair to hold a boy's past against him, when he already paid for it, and has reformed? His teachers even say he has changed. ——— BROTHER-PROTECTED

Dear B.P.: By the time your letter reaches print, your boy friend will be gone. It takes longer two weeks to process a syndicated newspaper column. I'm sorry!

If things weren't straightened out before he left, perhaps his letters to you and your parents will do the trick. A boy can change in three years, and he deserves the chance to prove it. ——— H.

Youth Beat

UNDERGROUND ANGELS: Underground newspapers continue to set new records for trash and filth. The classified ads are not to be believed. Still the papers stay alive on city newsstands and in the hands of sidewalk "hawks." Most of the peddlers are as miserable looking as the papers they sell. One interesting note . . . record companies are, virtually the only reputable advertisers. Strange bedfellows! Not really. Elements of the music trade feel they must be vile, vulgar or both to qualify as creative and contemporary.

COMPUTERIZED FUZZ: Computer print-outs keep the heat on highway patrol and traffic officers. Performance is easily measured weekly or monthly and sometimes eager superiors can demand more and more arrests. No need to set up quotas . . . the competitive fever takes over.

Traffic violation arrests soar. Teens get hurt in the process. Mechanical defects summons (vehicle inspection drives) are big source of new police statistics. This depersonalization of police work has several by-products that are to be reckoned with by state and city officials. First, the statistics on arrests go up, up, up and contribute to the "law and order" panic that is everywhere today. Second, dedicated policemen cannot function under a "must" system for arrests. Many highly trained, intelligent officers are leaving their services because they feel they are further away from the people than ever before. Traffic "warnings" are almost a thing of the past. The idea that arrests, alone, will cure traffic ills is just as far in the past. Teens hope that humanized cops will reappear. With computer performance print-outs, their chances of meeting even one are pretty slim.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE:
How often is it safe to expose a child's mouth to X rays? My two children, aged 8 and 10, see the dentist every six months and at each visit he X rays their teeth.

ANSWER: It's never really "safe" to X ray anyone—anywhere in the body.
But, of course, there are circumstances when it must be done.

Children, particularly,
should not be routinely exposed to dental X rays of any type, and certainly not to full-mouth X rays. X rays of all the teeth.

If diagnostic X rays are deemed necessary, they should, of course, be taken but only with proper precautions:

1. X-ray exposure time kept to a minimum by use of extra-fast film.
2. X-ray machine adequately filtered.
3. Patient's body covered with leaded apron.

When a child's permanent teeth have fully erupted, it may be necessary to take diagnostic bitewing X rays.
one on each side of the mouth, but not oftener than once a year.

Attempting to locate cavities by instrument exam
only is much too uncertain, and X rays are the "eyes"
that dentists use to see between the teeth. But the same precautions as those listed above should be followed.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE:
Is there still danger of mouth cancer if a man cuts down drastically on cigarettes but starts chewing tobacco instead?

ANSWER: Yes. Even though the products of combustion from burning tobacco are eliminated, tobacco chewing may indeed increase chance of oral cancer.

Irritation from direct and continuous contact of tobacco on the mucous membrane of the cheek can produce neoplastic changes in that tissue which later may become frankly invasive cancer.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE:
I had six upper front teeth
capped about two years ago and ever since then the gums around them have been swollen, inflamed and bleed easily. I've been told to massage my gums but that only worsens the condition. What shall I do?

ANSWER: Since your gum inflammation is localized in the area of the caps, and since they are continuously inflamed, it can be assumed that the cause is most probably due to caps that have faulty margins, poor contacts or are not spaced properly at the gum line.

To correct these faults, it may be necessary to remove the caps and either adjust them or remake them.

Admittedly, this is a terrible nuisance but it's preferable to chronic gum infection.

DeQueen Wins Two of Three From Hope

By RALPH ROUNTON
Star Sportswriter

On a night plagued with fouls and turnovers, three Hope basketball teams traveled to DeQueen with only the Bobkittens winding up victorious last night. Coach Jim Jordan's Kittens came back from an extremely cold first half to beat down the Leopard Cubs 31-13. DeQueen won the other two contests, taking the senior girls game 39-32 and capping the Bobcats 70-50 in the final.

Action next week begins on Monday night at the Blevins Jr. Tournament, as the Hope Junior Girls take on Willisville in a first-round game at 6:30 p.m. that evening. Tuesday night sends the Bobkittens, Lady Cats, and Bobcats to Gurdon for three, and on Wednesday the Bobkittens begin play in the Fairview Jr. Tourney.

Defending runners in the OBU Invitational, the Lady Cats take part in that competition beginning on Thursday night against Class A Hughes in the first round, but should the Ladies fail to win they will accompany the senior boys to Ashtown on Friday evening.

'Nothing About Him is Typical'

LOS ANGELES—(NEA)—There is an improper air about Wilt Chamberlain that defies description and irritates hell out of strangers.

Perhaps it is the thick, black beard that hides his chin and dips down to cover his Adam's apple. Will Rogers used to say that a bobbing Adam's apple told a lot about a man. In this aspect, Wilt is inscrutable.

Maybe it is the assurance with which Wilt Chamberlain handles Wilt Chamberlain. Something about the way he says, "Yes, my man," stings of condescension. And nothing stings like condescension.

Then again, it might be just a typical swollen athletic ego, nurtured along by $200,000 or so every year and the knowledge that he is the most influential force in the history of basketball. Nothing about Wilt is typical, however, so forget that.

Whatever it is, let it be said that here is a guy who is 7-foot-3 and knows it.

San Diego Rockets

PROSPECTUS—No. 1 draft choice Elvin Hayes should get Rockets moving upward. The Big E is 6-9; an excellent shooter and rebounder. Rest of club suffered through madden season with poorest record in NBA history. But Jack McMahon may smile some this season, thanks to Hayes. Prediction—Fourth in West.

FORWARDS—John Black, 6-10, led Rockets in scoring with 20.2. He'll start with either Don Kojis (19.7) or Toby Kimball (11.0). Henry Finkel, seven-footer, also figures. Rating—B—.

CENTER—Hayes is favorite to become Rookie of Year. Houstonite will give Rockets big scoring threat they lacked so woefully last season. Finkel will spell him. Rating—B+.

BACKCOURT—Par Riley, rookie adjustments behind him, should come into his own. A forward in college (Kentucky), he spent last season learning backcourt Jim Barnett, hustling third-year man, will start with him. Nick Jones and Hammon Williams are reserves. Rating—C.

ROOKIES—Rockets are high on Rick Adelman (Loyola of California) and John Trapp (Nevada Southern). Also getting looks are Stu Lantz (Nebraska) and Harry Barnes (Northeastern). Still, rookie picture is wrapped up in two words: Elvin Hayes.

Leroy Kelly . . .

'You Don't Get the Praise on Defense'

By LEE MUELLER
NEA Sports Writer

OAKLAND, Calif.—(NEA)—It's not easy to forget but sometimes it's awfully hard to remember. Ask Rodger Bird of the Oakland Raiders.

Every season a dozen or so college football players do it, however reluctantly. After years of headlines, fanfare and end sweeps as running backs, they—like Bird—graduate to the professional leagues and become, of all things, defensive backs.

Obviously, the adjustment requires some re-evaluating. Heretofore, the defensive back has been a guy who couldn't cut it on offense. Too slow. Too small. Too weak. Congratulations, son. You're a defensive back.

The pros, however, view the situation somewhat differently. Defensive backs here eat at the same table with the quarterback. In a game dominated by the forward pass, the man who can knock it down is a prized commodity.

Rodger Bird is aware of this. Oakland didn't pay him $200,000 because he once scored four touchdowns in a game for the University of Kentucky. The Raiders paid him $200,000 because he was 6-foot, 195 pounds and quick; because, as a sophomore, he impressed them as a free safety.

Bird impressed many people in those days. He ran back kickoffs, caught passes and made All-Southeastern Conference as a running back. Now, the only time Bird runs with the football is when he intercepts a pass or returns a punt.

"It's been so long since I ran the ball out of the backfield that I've forgotten how," he said, not kidding. "I've never carried the ball in professional football. I just don't know what it would be like."

Returning punts, Bird points out, should not be confused with running out of the backfield.

"There's really no similarity," he said. "On punt run-backs, you don't have to dodge linebackers and the demand on your timing is not that great."

On occasion, Bird, now 24, still flashes that old flair, breaking away on a punt return. It still takes two or three men to ride him down. He still slams the ball to the turf in disgust at not having made a touchdown. But it's not the same.

Professional football has given a new dimension to defense, true, but the acclaim and recognition still go to the offensive personnel. It is a fact about which most defensive backs gripe. Bird just admits it.

"No," he says, "there isn't as much personal satisfaction for me in playing defense. It's one of the biggest things I've had to adjust to—you don't get the praise on defense that you do on offense."

Rodger Bird is, however, satisfied. It has been so long now, that even he doubts he could have made it as a running back.

"It don't really think I've got the burning speed it takes to be a running back," he said. "Anyway, I now think defense is tougher to play than offense. It was a real hard adjustment for me to make, probably because I'd played on the other side of the (scrimmage) line so long."

"Maybe some guys are more fortunate and adjust more quickly, but it took awhile for me . . . the backing up . . . coming in."

If you ask Oakland's little free safety, Dave Grayson, about Bird, though, he'll tell you the jug-eared Corbin, Ky., native made the adjustment rather nicely.

"Rodger already had a knack for being in the right

Kelly . . . and The Specter of Injury

By MARTY RALBOVSKY
NEA Sports Writer

CLEVELAND—(NEA)—Somebody mentioned Gale Sayers and Leroy Kelly's smile vanished.

"What a tragedy," said the National Football League's leading rusher, almost inaudibly. "One freak play has put in jeopardy the career of one of the finest running backs who ever lived. Doctors say he'll recover, sure. But who knows how something like that will affect him mentally?"

Leroy Kelly doesn't really like to talk about injuries.

None of the lucky ones do.

For five years, he has tantalized opposing defenses and escaped unhurt. He has had his share of muscle pulls, slight sprains and purple bruises, sure, but never has he been completely immobilized with an injury as severe as Sayers'.

The thought of one, he admits, is frightening.

"Sometimes I lay in bed at night and think about such things," he says. "I don't worry about regular contact. I fear the freak plays. The plays that shouldn't happen, but do. They ruin people. Most of the serious injuries happen in freak situations. It's a fact."

Kelly says the specter of injury doesn't affect his play, although he's the prime target of every defense the Cleveland

Browns face.

"I try to stay in the best shape possible," he said with a trace of smile that revealed an abbreviated goatee under his lower lip. "I don't do anything extra to avoid being hurt. I just do the regular exercises. I try to stay relaxed, though. Nice and loose. When I get hit, I like to roll with the impact."

Sometimes, Kelly admits, he lets his guard down.

"A very bad habit is tightening up just before contact is made. That's a good way to get hurt. You've got to be loose to ride with the force of a blow. Otherwise, you'll absorb the full impact of it, which is bound to wear you down, if nothing else."

Leroy Kelly put a full Windsor knot in his canary yellow silk tie and reached for a double-breasted brown vest. His affluence is advertised in the clothes he wears—monogrammed shirts, single-button suit coats with English lapels, undershirts and shorts of black silk.

At 27, he has filled the shoes of Jim Brown in the Cleveland attack more adequately than anyone expected (some veterans will tell you he has surpassed Brown as an all-around running back and team player already). His compact body of dark-caramel is sculptured without an ounce of overweight, yet it has filled out considerably since the days when he played at Morgan State in Maryland.

"Luck," says Leroy Kelly, "also played its part. There have been times the last few years when I've had hell scared out of me by opposing teams. Times I've been belted from the blind side and I've gone down with my knees and ankle twisting in all directions. There were times when I thought I'd never be able to get up. But, luckily, I did.

"I've ran across only a couple of cheap-shot artists who try to put me out of a game. Most of the defenses will hit hard in hopes of intimidating a running back and make him worry about the next time he has to go through the same hole. But very few try deliberately to hurt a running back. Sometimes, in the heat of a game, somebody piles on, but that's only natural. Foul tactics, as a rule, are the least of my worries."

One thing that does worry him is mental relaxation.

"I fight myself to stay in a relaxed frame of mind," says Kelly. "I usually go to a movie the night before a game and get to bed around 10:30. I try to sleep as late as I can, then go to the park. Usually I sleep good the night before a game. And I try to avoid hurrying to the park at all costs."

Leroy Kelly says he's finally ready to play when he's all suited up and waiting to run onto the field.

Then—and only then—will he rush.

'Flighty' Stories

ROME, Italy—(NEA)—A threatened strike of all communications in Italy did not come off, and reporters covering the World Cup tournament at the Circolo Golf Olgiata here got their dispatches away in proper fashion.

But the anxiety they showed concerning the strike would draw a sneering upper lip from Frank Moran, who is described as the "doyen of all British golf writers."

Moran is in his 80s but still writes a weekly column for the Scotsman, in Edinburgh. Moran is a bit disdainful of modern sportswriters who, he feels, have a snap. In his day, there weren't even telephones from stadium to office. Carrier pigeons were employed.

"Mister Moran," one of the London reporters was saying, "is one of the great sportswriters of them all. And he writes his stories in spidery longhand. He usually starts something like: 'Harry Vardon would never have played the fourth the way Jack Nicklaus did today . . .'"

The reporter went on to tell a story Frank Moran tells.

Early in the century Moran was covering a soccer match between the two bitter rivals in Scotland, the Celtic and the Rangers. "The Celtic are Catholic and the Rangers are Protestant," said the reporter, "and fiercely so."

"Even today 100,000 fans come out to see a game which always is spirited. Each time they play, and it's about once a month, at least 40 fans are hospitalized and 110 are carted off to prison."

"Others wear tin hats to ward off flying beer bottles. Those who are still somewhat sound when the game is over go to a pub, have a few, then get into a fight to finish the evening entertainment."

In the stadium, the press box was near the roof. On the roof were the pigeon coops. With them was the dispatcher who took the running play-by-play from Moran, quickly folded the paper, slipped it into the capsule on the pigeon's foot and sent the pigeon fluttering away.

There may not have been as many pigeons on the roof as there are on a Sunday morning in St. Mark's Square, but there were plenty. One was always kept in reserve for the final score.

This game was particularly exciting. There was keen play and brawls and other forms of pleasure which caught the enthusiasm of Moran and he scrawled note after note to the dispatcher.

The dispatcher, a hardened professional, took the messages and in almost one motion inserted them into capsules and, with deft hands, released the pigeons, calling "off."

So it went. As the game continued, and tension mounted, the number of pigeons on the roof dwindled.

Finally, one remained. The game ended in a great flurry. There was a goal. And frenzy on the field, in the stands and on the roof.

Moran scribbled the final score and hurriedly handed it to the dispatcher. The dispatcher took it, grabbed the last pigeon and shouted, "Off."

Then the dispatcher looked in his hand. He stared at the piece of paper with the score.

Above the tumult, the dispatcher screamed at the soaring pigeon "CELTIC 2, RANGERS 1!"

"The next game," added the London reporter, "they used parrots."

place at the right time," Grayson said, "and there was something about the guy that was real beautiful. I guess it's the way he hits. Some guys, front safeties, are afraid to come up and hit. Not Rodger. When Rodger hits you, you know you've been hit."

A quiet type in college, Bird has had to some vocal adjusting in the pros, too.

"When you play back there, you have to be a motor mouth," Grayson says, "you know, talk a lot, let people know where you're going to be. Rodger communicates real well."

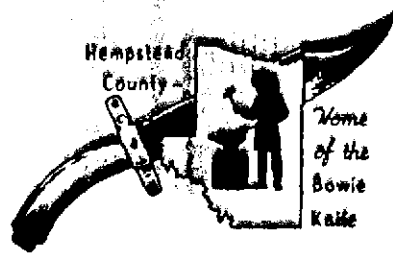

As an offensive halfback, Rodger Bird didn't need to say much. Touchdowns are loud noises. He has learned at Oakland, however, that a defensive back must speak for himself.

But Who Has The Time
To Attend?

With many a doleful sounding, they are holding a conference on the problems of the aged, and they are quite right. Being old under the dread assurance of growing older is a problem and the sentimental affection which refers to this era as the "Golden Years" doesn't deceive most of us. More often, it is an ailing gall bladder.

Coming up next—and quite by coincidence, is a conference on the problems of the young, and we can anticipate the findings. Being young gets harder all the time, and, in sum, represents more of an affliction than a blessing. Beneath all this, however, is an unwritten and unspoken assumption. It is the assumption that the middle-aged have no problems—certainly none worth calling a conference about. This assumption is altogether mistaken.

The middle-aged have all the problems of the young, plus all of the problems of the old, plus all the problems peculiar to the middle-aged. It is this overwhelming mixture, in fact, which speeds them on their way to senility and leaves them so little time for attending conferences.—Charleston (W. Va.) Daily Mail

Now Hold On, Leaves

It is the way of a leaf in Autumn (frost-bitten, you know) to disaffiliate from its tree, and fall. There it joins the quintillions that have preceded it; all to be neatly raked and basketed somewhere out of sight. Sometimes, standing knee-deep in them, you wish Mr. Newton had never invented gravity. Nashville (Tenn.) Banner

Short Skirts

Paris taxicab drivers are organizing a new kind of protest movement. They are determined to drive miniskirts from the sidewalks because they are more dangerous than women drivers. "The whole purpose of the miniskirt is to attract men's eyes which should be on the road," one of the cab drivers said. "The least they could do would be to wear long overcoats on public streets." —Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel

Pie In The Sky

Human Events, a conservative weekly newspaper, has a short item that carries its own editorial message. It reports that a sign in a congressman's campaign headquarters warned: "Be wary of candidates who promise pie in the sky. They plan to use your dough." —Jacksonville (Fla.) Florida Times-Union

Business To Spend Billions on Plants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Businesses expect to increase their outlays for new plants and equipment by nearly $4 billion a year in both the present quarter and the first quarter of 1969, a government survey shows.

The survey by the Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission indicates a robust rise in capital investment which further eases fears of a general economic lag.

Capital outlays for the quarter ending in September ran at a $63.45 billion annual rate, an $800 million gain from the June quarter.

Businessmen, however, expect to step up outlays during the current quarter to a $67.25 billion annual rate, a gain of $3.8 billion.

Lights, Especially at Christmas, Play Very Important Life Role

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

Pretty Christmas lights were turned on in Hope this week, and if you hadn't gotten the spirit of the season before, the multitude of tiny, twinkling, colored lights ought to do the trick.

Lights give emphasis to color, but color itself plays an important part in our lives. Our language reflects this.

We say we're feeling blue... but blue skies fill us with optimism... and blue is the favorite color of most men.

We might be green with envy... but when we want to "think cool," we picture the quiet greens of the forest.

We might see red... but any combination of red, white and blue creates a surge of patriotic feeling—and red makes the most memorable sunset.

Experts explain that colors induce basic associations in our lives. Red and yellow mean heat and warmth... blue means cleanliness and freshness... green makes us think of something we can eat.

Black is usually thought of as the color of mourning, while white is symbolic of purity. In this country, that is, in China, white is the color of mourning, and brides usually choose a color like pink for their weddings.

Even the word, Color, has different connotations. We "raise the colors," meaning the flag. We "color a story," if it's inaccurate, and if the tale is crude or vulgar, it is "off color."

A teacher of writing composition once gave his class this assignment: describe red, the color, as you would to a person who has been blind from birth. How would you accomplish this? Another sense must be brought into focus, of course.

After a little thought, we decided that it could be this way: Red is the way music with a beat sounds.

Black is the way velvet feels. White is the way vanilla ice cream tastes.

Green is the way grass wet with dew smells.

But you and I know that doesn't get the full message across. We know because we are able to see colors. Even color-blind people see some hues.

And we are fortunate at this season of the year, especially, with so many splendid colors making our pretty world even lovelier.

Look all around you. Aren't those Christmas lights pretty!

Arkansan Named by Stock Group

ROGERS, Ark. (AP)—Roosevelt Roberson of Paris was re-elected president of the Arkansas Holstein Association at its annual meeting here Thursday.

The group elected Clyde Rone of Bentonville state vice president. Mrs. Bryon Blackburn secretary - treasurer and Mrs. Clyde Rone to the new job of editor of the association's quarterly publication.

The next annual meeting will be Dec. 4, 1969, in the Northwest District at a place to be named.

With more than 50 members and guests attending, the group voted to enlarge the awards program to encourage junior members showing animals at the state level.

A blanket will be given to the grand champion winner, with trophies to be awarded to the state champion, junior champion and the junior compiling the most points.

The "Holstein boy and girl" for 1969 are Ronald Rone of Bentonville and Ruth Huber of Subiaco, the associated determined.

Two Arkansans Are Killed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two Arkansas servicemen have been killed in action in Vietnam, the Defense Department said Thursday.

They were Army Sgt. Billy J. Clayborn, husband of Jewell A. Clayborn of Knoxville (Johnson County), and Army Spec. 4 Don W. Bonner, husband of Janet L. Bonner of Hoxie.

Seating Is Holding Up Peace Talks

PARIS (AP) — U.S. and North Vietnamese negotiators have agreed on seven procedural issues for four-way peace talks, but they still can't agree on who will sit where.

U.S. officials said the seven points agreed on Friday by Cyrus R. Vance, No. 2 man in the U.S. delegation, and his North Vietnamese counterpart, Ha Van Lau, are:

— The first four-way session will be restricted to conference procedure.

— Each group will have a speaker.

— They will meet in the same room previously used for U.S.-North Vietnamese talks at the Majestic Hotel.

— The allied and Communist sides each may bring 10-12 persons.

— Business can be conducted in English, Vietnamese and French.

— Tape recorders will be admitted.

— Newsmen will not be admitted.

Vance and Lau each scored points in these procedural agreements, which left some leeway for individual definition.

The Americans see the speaker arrangement as two spokesmen on each of two sides, one each for Washington, Saigon, Hanoi and the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front.

The Americans see the conference makeup as two delegations of 10 to 12 members each, while Hanoi views it as four delegations of five to six persons each.

From the U.S. standpoint, Vance won the agreement to keep newsmen out of the first rule-making meeting. The North Vietnamese said they wanted the press admitted, but the Americans feel the Communists will be more inclined to reach a reasonable compromise without the opportunity to make public statements.

The shape of the conference table, although a seemingly trivial issue, is one which the rivals feel could be translated into a bargaining advantage later on. Consequently there has been no breakthrough on this point.

The Communists want a square table, whose equal sides would fit their claim that the NLF has equal status in a four-sided conference.

The United States wants two long tables each facing each other, to support its claim that the parley is composed of two sides. The allies do not recognize the NLF, which the Saigon government regards as an outlaw tool of Hanoi.

One possibility for a compromise would be a round table, although some diplomats said this would not prevent delegations from spacing themselves to appear separate.

The South Vietnamese contingent is expected to arrive here by noon Sunday, and supporters planned a gala airport rally to outdo the reception accorded the NLF group five weeks ago.

Chief U.S. negotiator W. Averell Harriman is due back tonight from a short Washington visit.

Navy to Send Ships Into Black Sea

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. Navy is sending two destroyers into the Black Sea on "routine operations" in the next few days and the plan prompted a Soviet complaint today that it is dangerous because of tensions in the Middle East.

The Black Sea provides the Soviet fleet its only outlet to the Mediterranean.

The Soviet complaint came in a dispatch from Ankara, Turkey, appearing in the Soviet Communist party newspaper Pravda today.

"It is completely obvious that the forthcoming visit of the uninvited guests follows the aim of a further complication of the situation in a region immediately adjacent to the Soviet Union," the dispatch said.

A spokesman of the U.S. Navy European headquarters said in London the USS Turner and the USS Dyess will be operating in international waters, even though in the Black Sea.

Flabbergasted by Letter

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — City Comptroller Hyman A. Pressman describes himself as "flabbergasted" at having received an advice-seeking letter from President-elect Richard M. Nixon.

The letter asked for the comptroller's assistance in "finding persons who can make significant contributions to our country."

"I don't know how I got on the mailing list," Pressman said. He disclosed that this was the second letter he had received from Nixon. The first letter, he said, thanked him for his campaign work.

"I wrote back saying, 'It was nothing.' It really was nothing. I campaigned for Humphrey."

Nixon Aide Is Doctor of Divinity

By HARRY KELLY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief talent scout for the Nixon administration's first team is a doctor of divinity who once graded potatoes and now grades potential secretaries of state.

And Dr. Glenn A. Olds doesn't think the best potatoes or men necessarily come in neat round packages.

Olds, former president of Massachusetts' Springfield College, spent seven months interviewing 1,500 persons—sizing them up as possible cabinet secretaries, advisers, administrators and consultants for Richard M. Nixon.

As Nixon and his advisers go through the process of selecting the men to replace Johnson administration appointees, they are working with Olds' scouting reports. There is a folder for each major appointive position open to the President-elect with cross references.

In studying them, Nixon will find some surprises.

Olds, who declined to name names in an interview, said he recommended some of the top men in the country for roles that might be considered unusual—under the theory square pegs get stule in square holes.

"I used to run a potato sorter and I just don't believe that all the best meat comes from this round package," said Olds, his fingers shaping a circle.

"In fact, I have a little suspicion of the well-rounded man with the short-radius. I think we need angularity. We need creativity."

Thus in making recommendations to Nixon he included one group "my staff cozily calls the Oldsian Category."

"In that category I recommend always someone like that—that is to say a person that you'd say, 'Are you out of your cotton-picking mind, Olds? Why this guy? I always thought of him as this or this or this.'"

"I did this with some of the top people in the country, that is people who are always and conventionally thought of in a particular role. I recommended them in other, different roles."

"You know Whitehead (Alfred North Whitehead, mathematician and philosopher) once said that ideas are like fish; you catch them fresh or they stink... You get a man habituated to a field, he goes stale."

Olds is 47, his brown suit has a natty cut, his sideburns are modestly long and his entry in Who's Who carries an even longer list of academic credits, including a doctor of divinity from Willamette University and Ph. D. in philosophy from Yale.

He is author of "The Christian Corrective to the Campus Confusion."

Nevertheless, "I'm an Oregon farm boy so my orientation is both earthy and practical," said Olds.

When he was at Springfield, the late President John F. Kennedy was on the college board "and I was involved in helping to get the Peace Corps going."

He also helped Sargent Shriver set up Vista.

How did he become Nixon's talent scout? "I backed into this thing," he said, by writing a memorandum on a new foreign policy strategy which was shown to Nixon by a mutual friend.

Thus he became Nixon's special assistant for manpower and development with a "clear understanding" between them.

U.S. Observes Pearl Harbor Anniversary

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — America remembered its fighting men killed during the Pearl Harbor attack 27 years ago with a special memorial service today at the USS Arizona memorial.

Representatives of the National Conference of State Legislators were among those at services on the gleaming white memorial which straddles the sunken battleship.

Normally the only memorial programs held aboard the white monument are on Memorial Day. But Secretary of the Navy Paul R. Ignatius granted special authorization for today's rites.

John L. O'Brien of the Washington state House of Representatives, president of the legislative leaders, presented a plaque to Rear Adm. Fred E. Bakutis, commander of the 14th N7-F3 District, Pearl Harbor.

The plaque, which will be placed in the Arizona memorial's museum area said:

"To the men of the U.S. armed forces who died on Dec. 7, 1941: In peace you served as our defenders; in battle our protectors; in death, our reminder that liberty is our greatest strength. We salute you."

A Marine, Cpl. Phillip Salmon of Muskogee, Okla., and a sailor, Boatswain's Mate I.C. Paul Whittleton of Wedgefield, S.C., carried a large white carnation and lavender orchid floral wreath to O'Brien and Stewart Lamprey, incoming president of the legislative leaders. Lamprey is president of the New Hampshire state senate.

The floral display was dropped in the waters over the sunken battleship. The rainbow-colored oil rings, which still surface from the submerged vessel, blended with the floating wreath.

The legislative leaders attending the ceremony included delegates from every state as well as Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

The 15-minute ceremony closed with the firing of three volleys by the Marine Corps riflemen and the playing of echo taps. There were no speeches.

The Arizona rests in 38 feet of water at the bottom of Pearl Harbor. The monument over it was dedicated in 1962. More than 222,600 people visited the memorial so far this year.

A large marble wall in the shrine room of the memorial is engraved with the names of the 1,177 Navy and Marine Corps officers and men who were killed in the attack. There are 1,100 men entombed in the sunken ship.

Thinks States Should Fight Poverty War

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Winthrop Rockefeller said today that each of the states must be allowed to fight its own individual war on poverty.

Rockefeller made the statement at the Republican Governors Conference.

"Because there are essentially 50 different such wars, the individual states absolutely must direct the strategy and execution," he said. "Washington will never devise a master plan that can do it."

Rockefeller told newsmen he had not discussed his speech with President-elect Richard M. Nixon. He said, however, that the speech was written after Nixon's stand on the poverty program had been studied thoroughly.

AP&L Program Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — An application by Arkansas Power & Light Co. for authority to construct a nuclear reactor near Russellville, Ark., was approved Thursday by the Atomic Energy Commission's Safety and Licensing Board.

The reactor will be on the north bank of the Arkansas River, covering 1,100 acres.

Gas Truck Burns at Little Rock

NORTH LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A gasoline truck exploded and burned this morning at a gasoline loading plant, near North Little Rock, injuring one person.

Authorities said Charles Rounsavall of Little Rock, the driver of the truck, had burns of the face, hands and legs. He was reported in fair condition at a Little Rock hospital.

Plant officials estimated the damage at more than $100,000 but less than $250,000.

Officers said the truck was being loaded with gasoline when the accident occurred. The plant is located about one mile east of North Little Rock near U.S. 70.

Bill Allows Bequests of Body Organs

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A bill to allow bequests of body organs will be introduced in the 1969 legislature, state Rep. Calvin R. Ledbetter Jr. of Little Rock said Thursday.

The Arkansas Medical Society is preparing the "anatomical gift act," which Ledbetter said he would introduce.

Its basis is a model statute drawn by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws and approved by the American Bar Association.

Eugene R. Warren, attorney for the medical society, is preparing a draft of the Arkansas bill.

He said he had been asked by many physicians to prepare some kind of bill that would allow persons 18 years of age or older to leave body organs, by will, for transplant or to leave them by a document other than by a will if the document is signed by the donor, or signed for him in his presence, and, in both instances, in the presence of two witnesses.

Housing Loan Approved

MENA, Ark. (AP)—The Department of Housing and Urban Development has approved a preliminary loan of $22,400 for low-rent public housing at Mena, Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said Thursday.
